

---

POETRY AND ADVERTISING: PRINCIPLES OF COMMUNICATION

---

by

Tania Christidis

BBS Neue Folge 9

Shaker Verlag
Aachen 2002

Die Deutsche Bibliothek - CIP-Einheitsaufnahme

Christidis, Tania:

Poetry and Advertising: Principles of Communication / Tania Christidis.

Aachen : Shaker, 2002

(Bochumer Beiträge zur Semiotik ; Neue Folge, Band 9)

ISBN 3-8265-9960-8

Copyright Shaker Verlag 2002

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise, without the prior permission of the publishers.

Printed in Germany.

ISBN 3-8265-9960-8

ISSN 1437-3335

Shaker Verlag GmbH • P.O. BOX 1290 • D-52013 Aachen

Phone: 0049/2407 /9596-0 • Telefax: 0049/2407/9596-9

Internet: www.shaker.de • eMail: info@shaker.de

ABSTRACT

The many recent changes in the cultural and social functions of poetry rendered traditional theories of poetry obsolete. In the past, poetry criticism has been of two main types: on the one hand, descriptive accounts of poetic innovation following in the steps of traditional literary criticism, and, on the other, semiotic or stylistic works which use particular poetic trends to support general principles. The two types of works have never intersected successfully.

The present study aims to create a ground of coherence between the ontological and cognitive aspects of poeticity on the one hand, and the social and cultural functions from which they derive and which in turn they generate, on the other. It chooses, therefore, to discuss contemporary poetic forms and activities within a conceptual framework which brings together principles of relevance theory in communication and ethnographical-empirical research. Two genres which might otherwise be considered incompatible are brought into contact and are found to be complementary – poetry and advertising. Their complementarity can be demonstrated from the existence in language of two universals which form their respective generic basis: reflection and ostension.

In chapters one and two, this thesis is established through analyses of the works of Sperber and Wilson, Tanaka, Riffaterre, Lotman and Kristeva, and by discussion of examples of interaction between poetry and advertising. A group of corollary concepts are derived, such as poetic indirection in market metaphors specific to advertising communication (following Riffaterre's terminology), and retropoetic communication in advertising, i.e. communication which dissolves the poetic symbolic and replaces it with a semiotic in symbolic disguise (following Kristeva's terminology).

At the pragmatic level, the study investigates interactions between poetry and advertising through examination of schemes such as Poetry Places (which integrates poetry, poets and the public with institutions, industry and the market through programmes of poetic residencies), or Poems on the Underground, Big Wide Words and Moving Poetry (which circulate poems on public transport systems) (see chapter three). The social and ideological role of poetry is further investigated at semantic and stylistic levels in an overview of contemporary poetries and their media of circulation in chapter four. Poetry is observed in the process of becoming a narrative framework for sociality, an instrument for business and social development, as well as a critical aesthetic tool.

In chapter five, analyses of interviews with 300 people waiting at bus stops, with academics at Reading University and with a group of poets reveal three types of poetic reception: residual-elitist, pragmatic and synchronic. The interviews also reveal that the interaction between poetry and advertising and the generic hybridisation that results from it create a system with sociostatic properties, i.e. a mechanism of moderation and balance between idealistically egalitarian and exploitative, economics and literature, industry and art.

CONTENTS

Abstract	page v
Contents	vi
Acknowledgements	ix
List of illustrations	x
Introduction	1
Preamble: Defining poetic communication	9
Roman Jakobson and the function of the poetic in language	11
Metaphor: a mark of cognitive coherence	15
Endnotes	20
Chapter one
Poeticalness in ordinary conversation, advertising and poetry: relevance theory	26
Ambiguity, inference and mutuality: Empson (1930)	26
Recognition of the communicator's intentions	29
Ostension versus inference and advertising versus poetry	31
Ostensive-inferential communication at work	34
Overt and covert communication: Tanaka (1994)	36
Strong and weak implicatures	40
Implicature vs. explicature as substitute for Tanaka's 'covert' versus 'overt' Communication	44
Circumstances of communication assumed in relevance theory and advertising	50
Weak communication in advertising: advertisement analysis	51
Poetic effects of competitive implicatures in advertising	59
Endnotes	67
Chapter two
Theories of poetic communication and their relevance to the relation between poetry and advertising	70
Lotman's theory of artistic communication	72
Part one: Aspects of internal structure and functionality of the artistic text	74
The principle of transcoding in poetic communication	82
Elements of rhetorical organisation	86
The poetic plot	86
The alien word	88
Part two: The relevance of Lotman's principles to an integrative theory of poetry and advertising
Perception by opposition	91
Entropy	94
Advertisement analysis	100
Endnotes	107

Riffaterre's contradictions: an 'indirect' support for the relation poetry-advertising	111
Indirection	112
Poetic indirection in advertising	116
Hypogram and the poetic sign in advertising and poetry	117
Matrix and model	123
Poeticity	127
An implicit theory of poetry reading	129
Interpretants	135
Reading poetry in the medium of advertising: poem analysis	138
Endnotes	151
 Kristeva's Revolution in Poetic Language and the poetry workshop	155
General frame of reference	155
Kristeva's theory of communication and its relevance to poetic communication in workshops	158
The structure of the poetry workshop	159
First stage: The subject's genetic formation: semiotising the chora	160
Second stage: Poetic language as revolutionary signifying practice: the thetic	163
Third stage: The nature of poetic language: thesis	168
Fourth stage: The role of poetic language within the mechanism of social change	174
Sociality and Sexuality	175
Ethics and Politics	179
Endnotes	183
 Chapter three
Business-discursive interactions between poetry and advertising	186
Reification and mediatisation of culture	186
The symbolic – semiotic complementarity between advertising and poetry	190
Retropoetic communication in advertising	192
Poetry in business: aspects of market management in the 'Poetry Places' scheme	194
The role of poetry in the need-want fragmentation	194
'Poetry Places' and poetry's adaptation to market management structures	197
Poetry as business: realism or avant-garde?	205
Reification of poetry and the generalisation of poetic discourse	207
Poetry workshop communication from the speech-act perspective	210
Re-symbolising poetry through advertising narrativity	214
The institutional locus of poetry	217
Social relations at work in the poetry workshop	222
Pragmatic and aesthetic relations: biological survival or aesthetic foregrounding?	222
Poetry workshop discourse	225
Types of approaches	225
Psychological, intellectual and social dimensions at work in poetic creativity	227
The poetry workshop: entertainment, therapy, education and business	229
Endnotes	236

Chapter four
Genre and ideology in the interaction between poetry and advertising	244
Formal interactions between poetry and advertising	246
Poetry on ads	249
Ideological framework
Attributes of contemporary Western ideology	250
A reverse of the dissimulation game: apparent contradictions	251
False opponents	254
The capital of poetry in relation to advertising	256
Modernist and contemporary poetic orientations	259
Diagnosing society	265
Functional uniformisation between economy, culture and advertising: fragmentation or totality?	274
Internal factors of inter-generic relations between poetry and advertising	279
The expansion of advertising principles over poetry	280
Promotion	280
Rhetorical strategy	282
The expansion of artistic principles into advertising	284
Self-referentiality	284
Cognitive function by fictionalising	285
Inter-generic hybridisation between poetry and advertising	286
Endnotes	291
 Chapter five
Advertising poems: ethnographical and reader-response analysis	302
‘Poems on the Underground’ and ‘Big Wide Words’	304
What do poets think about poems on ads?	309
The inter-conditioning relation of opposition between poetry and advertising	315
Communication layers in ‘poems on ads’	317
‘Moving Poetry’: the context of communication	319
Reader responses to poems on the bus	322
Aspects of poetic reception in the mass media	327
Ethnographic challenges to reader-response theories	330
How do academics perceive poetry’s relations to unconventional media?	333
The boundary element in an integrative cultural system: technical aspects of reception	340
Types of reception: residual elitist, pragmatic and simultaneous	344
Endnotes	351
 Conclusions	357
 Bibliography	364
 Appendix	389
 Illustrations	390
 General index

Acknowledgements

The research which forms the foundation of this study has taken me through many and diverse social environments. I met many people whose cooperation contributed greatly to the writing of this work. Through all the years of research, Dr Jonathan Bignell of Reading University, England, and Professor Winfried Nöth of Kassel University, Germany, had faith in me: my gratitude cannot match the value of their support. I am grateful to Christopher Salvesen for our discussions about poetry. Cedric Brown has facilitated the much needed occasional financial support and Lionell Kelly has been kind enough to lend me his books on American poetry. I am very grateful to both.

A number of people deserve my thanks. My ethnographic research is the result of the kind cooperation of Judith Chernaik of London's 'Poems on the Underground', Alexandra Mermikides of London's 'Big Wide Words', Linda Barlow of Reading Borough Council, and Jonathan Riddell of the London Transport Museum Archives. My thanks for their kind reply to my questionnaires to poets Benjamin Zephaniah, John Citizen, Peter Sansom, Lavinia Greenlaw, Clive Wilmer, A. D. Harvey, Roger Garfitt, Matthew Sweeney, Erica Warburton, Ian Smith and Jane Draycott. My thanks to all the academic members of staff and postgraduate students in the Department of English of Reading University who have replied to my questionnaires concerning their perception of poetry in the mass media. My thanks also to all the people, approximately 300, who have kindly accepted to be interviewed at bus stops in Reading town centre in the Spring of 1996.

My participation at the Conference of Media Semiotics in Kassel, Germany, in March 1996, helped clarify the direction I was going to follow in my research over the following years. I am very grateful to Charles Forceville at Vrije University Amsterdam and Roland Posner at Technische Universit t Berlin for our discussions, exchange of ideas, materials and advice they provided.

I am grateful to Lynne and Iain Bell for their help with the photo formatting. Andy Campbell and Jim Redrup also deserve my thanks for offering me their IT and photocopying expertise.

I am very grateful indeed to Virginia Valentine of Semiotic Solutions for kindly offering to cover some of the publication costs of this book.

My thanks to Maria Carpov at Iasi University, Romania, who first stimulated my curiosity for semiotics. As my interest went on from there to embrace communication theories, my collaboration with Paul Copley at Guildhall University London has played a role in strengthening this orientation.

My thanks to Rank Hovis McDougal and to J. Walter Thompson for providing the advertisements on Plates 1 and 8a.

Aurelia Leonte and Socrates Christidis, my mother and my husband, deserve my humble thanks for their love and patience. They shape for me the meaning of life beyond quotidian concerns.

This book is dedicated to my son Andre.

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS

1. Granary Bread, Rank Hovis McDougal (billboard and television advertisement)
2.
  - a. Nissan, What Car?, April 1995: 106-7 (magazine advertisements)
  - b. Nissan, What Car?, April 1996: 96-7 (featuring female driver)
  - c. Nissan, What Car?, April 1996: 98-9 (featuring male driver)
3. Volvo, What Car?, April 1995: 108-9 (magazine advertisement)
4.
  - a. Mercedes C-class, estate, The Guardian, July 18, 1998: 6-7 (newspaper supplement magazine advertisements)
  - b. Mercedes E-class, AMG, The Guardian, August 22, 1998: 6-7
  - c. Mercedes A-class, The Guardian, September 12, 1998: back-cover
5. London Underground billboard advertisements:
  - a. 'The One Day Travel Card'
  - b. 'We Don't Want To Make A Meal Of It'
6. Poems circulated on London's Cowie Leaside Busses (panel advertisements):
  - a. 'Greed', by Zoe Congo
  - b. 'The Circle', by Celia
  - c. 'Conversation', by Alice Haworth-Booth
  - d. 'Five Ways of Looking at the Moon' by Sinead Morgan and 'Five Ways of Looking at the Sun', by Stephanie Sepulueda
  - e. 'Wiser', by Jasper Roy
  - f. Poems by Ian Stalkey
  - g. 'If Yu See', by Benjamin Zephaniah
7. Subaru car magazine advertisement, What Car?, April 1998:34.
8.
  - a. Polo Mint panel advertisement circulated on London Underground 1995-1996
  - b. Poem on London's Underground: 'The Leader', by Roger McGough (panel advertisements)
  - c. Poem on the London Underground in association with New York Underground: 'Crossing Brooklyn Ferry,' by Walt Whitman 9.
  - a. 'The Café', by John Hegley, postcard advertisement for Poetry Society
  - b. 'to a smooth finish', booklet advertisement for Carte Noire coffee 10.
  - a. Call-up, by Jane Draycott, photograph of the poem on Reading busses, 1996
  - b. Betty Fumble, anonymous verse on a Reading bus, 1996 (panel advertisements)
11. 'Apocalypse' and 'Obituaries' by Alain Arias-Misson, in Russell (1981: 25, 26)