ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

First of all, I would like to thank my supervisor Prof. Andreas Haufler for his support and inspiring comments. Working at his Seminar for Economic Policy was a very pleasant experience due to his competent and fair leadership.

Also, I am indebted to Prof. Thiess Büttner and Prof. Monika Schnitzer for being the second and third referee, respectively, in my thesis committee.

Furthermore, I am very grateful to my co-author Dr. Nadine Riedel for working as a team in two research projects for this thesis (Chapter 3 and 4). Her economic thinking and creativity is outstanding. In addition, I thank Ulrich Glogowsky and Marcus Strobel for their excellent research assistance in my last study (Chapter 5).

I enjoyed inspiring discussions with many people and I was able to benefit from their professional help and insightful feedback. Thus, I am indebted to Dr. Johannes Becker, Dr. Tobias Böhm, Flaviu Borcoman, Axel von Bredow, Prof. Ronald Davis, Dr. Marcus Drometer, Dr. Silke Englmaier, Erich Gluch, Prof. Georg von Graevenitz, Tanja Greiner, Thorsten Hansen, Dr. Florian Heiss, Lars Hornuf, Prof. Roland Ismer, Dr. Simon Loretz, Andreas Maier, Heike Mittelmeier and her team at the LMU-ifo Economics & Business Data Center (EBDC), Ferdinand Mittermaier, Dr. Michael Overesch, Dr. Stephan Rasch and Dr. Richard Schmidtke and their team at Deloitte, Dr. Johannes Rincke, Prof. Marco Runkel, Arno Schmöller, Renate Schwirtz, David Stadelmann, Dr. Christian Traxler, Dr. Johannes Voget, Dr. Georg Wamser, Prof. Joachim Winter and Dr. Klaus Wohlrabe. Furthermore, I thank four anonymous referees for very helpful comments.

German Research Foundation (DFG) granted financial support for the research project for three years, which is something I gratefully acknowledge.

Last but not least, very special thanks go to my wife Ioana, my mother, father, and to my friends for their emotional support, patience, and motivation.
